

APC Magazine: Dodgy iPod batteries exposed

"Apple has settled a class action overseas regarding faulty iPod batteries, but Australians will get nada.

Owners of iPods in the US will get gift vouchers, extended warranties and replacement batteries if their iPods don't meet the advertised targets for battery life and continuous playback.

However, people who bought iPods containing exactly the same batteries living elsewhere in the world, including Australia, will get nothing."

Click here to read this article from the September 2005 issue of APC magazine quoting Andrew Perry in his former role as national head of the IP & Technology group at Gadens Lawyers.